I like to watch TV. I like entertainment shows. And the most any TV show is the project "Voice Children". I don't know how to sing myself but I like to watch my peers do it as part of a television competition. I've been watching this show since the first season. I really liked the mentors, although now they have all changed. They always found words to cheer and comfort the participants who did not pass on. And it also happened that if one of the children did not sing very well, then the jury members would still turn to them to support them, since it was heard by the voice that the participant was very young. And it is very touching to watch how happy the kids and their relatives are if they continue to participate in the show. True, sometimes I don't quite approve of the choice of mentors, but this is their decision, because they are in the jury chairs, not me.
